October 2013

President's Salvo

Gentlemen,

We are in the midst of gathering the 2014 dues payments. Usually we just let everyone pay when they feel like it, and we are usually trying to gather the last few payments after the December 1 deadline, but this year we are trying a slightly different tactic. We are letting everyone know that we need to pay those dues early. Please, get those checks in the mail.

If you are wondering why the push, next year I have volunteered to be State Secretary, and if elected, will be responsible for completing the annual report to National. With 33 Chapters and 1900 members, it can be a daunting task to have it ready by National's deadline, but I am hoping that I will not have a problem with the St. Lucie River Chapter.

Thanks to you all for your efforts.

At the October 12, 2013 meeting, the St. Lucie River Chapter, Florida Society, Sons of the American Revolution presented the following Commendation Medals.

The Emergency Services Commendation Medal, recognizing accomplishments and/or outstanding contributions in the area of Emergency Medical Services, was presented to Martin County Fire Rescue Lieutenant Thomas Shimanek. Lieutenant Shimanek is a medical supervisor and is responsible for providing a higher level of advance life support care in the pre-hospital setting to seriously injured and ill victims. His duties include training and quality assurance for the emergency medical services provided in the field.

“During Lieutenant Shimanek’s time off, he volunteers a lot of time serving as a

Seth Fields inducted into the SAR

Seth Cody Fields was inducted as a new member of the St. Lucie River Chapter, Florida Society, Sons of the American Revolution on October 12, 2013. Seth is a descendant of Isaac Drake, a private soldier who served in Captain David Young's, Captain Jones Ward's, and Captain Hendrick's companies of the New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania lines.

Compatriot Fields volunteered to assume the duties of Color Guard Commander and Sergeant at Arms for the Chapter.

In Memoriam—Doug H. North

Why this Memorial? Most of our current members don't know Doug H. North and are not familiar with his association with our Chapter of the SAR. He was a founding member of the Chapter and president in the 1994-95 period of our existence. He also held several other offices in both the State and local Societies before his health forced him to leave the SAR in 2011. It is difficult to look at our list of past and present officers and not see Doug's name as a State or National Society Committee member or officer. He passed on August 25, 2013 and is now beside his wife in New York State. Doug was closely tied to the First Congregational Church, UCC. at Sadonia and Port St Lucie Boulevard. He was active in his church and participated in their Patriotic and spiritual services such as Independence Day and the four Chaplain's annual Service. Doug was an over 50 year Mason, a Veteran of WWII, and had a family with two sons. Doug also had a Scottish Rite of Freemasonry. Jay Wise and Phil Carr

Medical Officer for Southeast Florida Honor Flight. Honor flight is a non-profit organization created solely to honor America's World War II veterans for all their sacrifices...Tom's job on these flights is to ensure that these individuals are medically monitored so that they enjoy their special day", wrote Martin County Fire Rescue Chief Joseph V. Ferrara. "Our department is proud to have such a dedicated and hard working employee as Lieutenant Thomas Shimanek."

The Fire Safety Commendation Medal, recognizing accomplishments and/or outstanding contributions in the area of Fire Safety and Service, was presented to Martin County Fire Rescue Fire Prevention Bureau Chief Douglas Killane. Chief Killane's duties include fire inspection, plan and development reviews, as well as coordinating public education of fire safety and prevention.

"In 2012, Chief Killane applied for and was awarded a grant to develop a side by side fire sprinkler demonstration prop. The prop was extremely beneficial at showing the public how sprinklers can save lives and prevent property damage. The prop was difficult to erect and required significant manpower to rebuild after each fire. Chief Killane researched the development of a permanent steel structure that could be used and not require such intensive manpower. The prop was constructed after some donations from the Utilities Department and a great design program. The prop is now a part of Martin County Fire Rescue's education program.", wrote Martin County Fire Rescue Chief Joseph V. Ferrara. "We are proud of the work he (Bureau Chief Killane) has contributed to making this a success."

Major General Horatio Gates

Horatio Gates was a retired British soldier who served as an American Major General during the Revolutionary War. He was credited with victory in the Battles of Saratoga and blamed for defeat at the Battle of Camden. Gates was also involved in the 'Conway Cabal', an attempt to discredit and replace George Washington.

Gates was born in England about 1728. He obtained a military commission in 1745, serving with the 20th Foot in Germany during the War of the Austrian Succession, and was promoted to Captain of the 45th Foot in 1750. Gates later obtained a Captain's commission in a New York Independent Company.

During the French and Indian War, Gates served under General Edward Braddock in America. He was severely injured in the ill-fated Braddock Expedition. He was promoted to Major by the end of the war. Frustrated by prospects of advancement in the British Army, Gates sold his Major's commission and purchased a plantation in Virginia.

At the outbreak of the American Revolutionary War, Gates offered his services to George Washington, who urged the appointment of Gates as adjutant of the army. Gates was commissioned Brigadier General and Adjutant General on June 17, 1775. Gates is recognized as the first Adjutant General of the United States Army.

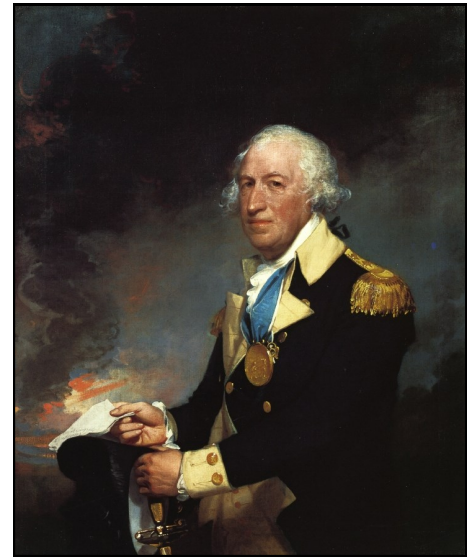

Gates' organization and administrative skills proved invaluable to the army, but Gates longed for field command. By June 1776, Gates was promoted to Major General and given command of the Canadian Department, then in disorganized retreat from Quebec. The retreat to Fort Ticonderoga brought conflict with the authority of Major General Philip Shuyler, commander of the Northern Department. It was decided Shuyler would command the department while Gates would command the Fort and the defense of Lake Champlain. Gates oversaw the enlargement of the American fleet needed to prevent the British from taking control of the lake. The command of this fleet was given to Benedict Arnold. The fleet was defeated in October 1776, but it succeeded in delaying the British advance against Ticonderoga until 1777.

In 1777, Congress blamed Schuyler and Arthur St. Clair for the loss of Fort Ticonderoga, and gave Gates command of the Northern Department. Gates commanded the army during the defeat of General Burgoyne's invasion in the Battles of Saratoga. Gates and his supporters took credit for the victory, although military action was directed by commanders such as Benedict Arnold, Enoch Poor, Benjamin Lincoln, and Daniel Morgan. Arnold in particular viewed Gates as reluctant to attack and had taken the field and attacked against Gates' orders. John Starks' victory at the Battle of Bennington also contributed to success at Saratoga.

By resolution, Congress presented a gold medal to Gates to commemorate his victories over the British in the Battles of Bennington, Fort Stanwix, and Saratoga.

Flush with success, Gates began communicating with Congress directly, outside of the proper chain of command. He obtained appointment from Congress as President of the Board of War, filling the post while retaining field command. In addition to this conflict of interest, the post made Gates George Washington's civilian superior. Gates sought appointment as commander-in-chief, and took part in a campaign to replace George Washington. Washington learned of the affair through written remarks of General Thomas Conway. Washington's supporters rallied to his aid, ending the 'Conway Cabal'. Gates resigned from the Board of War and was assigned command of the Eastern Department.

In May 1780, the fall of Charleston, South Carolina and the capture of General Benjamin Lincoln prompted Congress to place Gates in command of the Southern Department. Gates led forces south from North Carolina to face the British forces of General Cornwallis near Camden, South Carolina. In the Battle of Camden, Gates' army was routed, losing the baggage train and artillery, along with nearly 1000 men captured. Nathaniel Greene replaced Gates as commander on December 3rd, and Gates returned to Virginia.

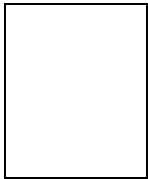

Congress passed a resolution calling for a board of inquiry to look into Gates' conduct, but withdrew the call in 1782. Gates rejoined Washington's staff.

Gates retired in 1784 and returned to his estate. He died on April 10, 1806. As a Major General, Gates is remembered for the valuable service he rendered.
